It should be used with caution in patients with hypotension, particularly with upright posture. It should be used with caution in patients with hypotension, particularly with upright posture.

ADVERSE REACTIONS: Adverse reactions to nitroglycerin are generally dose-related. The most common are headache, dizziness, lightheadedness, and flushing. These reactions are usually mild and transient. More serious reactions include hypotension, reflex tachycardia, and methemoglobinemia. Methemoglobinemia is a rare but potentially life-threatening condition characterized by the conversion of hemoglobin to methemoglobin, which is unable to carry oxygen. Symptoms include cyanosis, dyspnea, and fatigue. Treatment involves the administration of methylene blue.

DRUG INTERACTIONS: Nitroglycerin should be used with caution in patients taking other antihypertensive agents, as it may potentiate their effects. It should also be used with caution in patients taking other vasodilators, as it may increase the risk of hypotension. Nitroglycerin should be used with caution in patients taking other drugs that may cause hypotension, such as alcohol and sedatives.

PHARMACOLOGY: Nitroglycerin is a vasodilator that works by relaxing the smooth muscle of blood vessels, thereby increasing blood flow. It is used to treat angina pectoris and to improve blood flow in patients with peripheral vascular disease. It is also used to treat acute myocardial infarction and to reduce the workload of the heart in patients with heart failure.

HOW SUPPLIED: Nitroglycerin is available in several forms, including sublingual tablets, transdermal patches, and intravenous solutions. The sublingual tablets are typically 0.25 mg or 0.5 mg. The transdermal patches are available in strengths of 2 mg, 5 mg, and 10 mg per 24 hours. The intravenous solutions are available in strengths of 0.1 mg/mL, 0.2 mg/mL, and 0.4 mg/mL.

MINITRAN System: Minitran System is a transdermal patch system used for the treatment of angina pectoris. It consists of a reservoir containing nitroglycerin and a backing that allows the drug to be delivered through the skin. The patch is applied to the chest or upper arm and is worn continuously for 24 hours. The reservoir contains 13.3 mg of nitroglycerin, which is delivered at a rate of 0.2 mg per hour.

System Size: 9 mg, 18 mg, 36 mg, 54 mg.

Total Nitroglycerin: 20.0 cm², 13.3 cm², 6.7 cm², 3.3 cm².
